TO OUR INVESTORS, STAFF, BOARD MEMBERS, PARTNERS, AND VOLUNTEERS –

THANK YOU FOR BEING PART OF OUR COMMUNITY

Since 1958, we have inspired girls to be strong, smart, and bold. Our girls inspire us, challenge us, and push us to be our best. They overcome barriers, they explore the joy of reading, they build sisterhood, advocate in their communities, explore STEM, and prepare for college. We cannot do this work alone, and you are part of our girls’ success. Thanks to you, they rise.

Our Mission
To inspire all girls to be strong, smart, and bold.

HELPING GIRLS RISE

Dear Friends,
Thank you for supporting another amazing year at Girls Inc. of Alameda County. It is incredible to be a part of this deep community dedicated to inspiring girls to be strong, smart, and bold, and to realizing their potential. Because of all of you—girls rise.

As our girls grow, they depend on the community around them to provide the ideal conditions for their growth. Like plants require soil, nutrients, water, pruning, and weeding to bloom, our girls benefit from research-based programs, trained staff who serve as mentors, a positive and uplifting environment, sisterhood, volunteers who share their professional and life experiences that expand the girls’ possibilities, and all of our supporters who come together to enable their success.

Our girls rise when they are STRONG. Thanks to you, Girls Inc. provides resources and opportunities for girls to build their strength—from nutrition to fitness to mental, emotional, and reproductive health.

Girls rise when they are SMART. With your support, Girls Inc. builds literacy skills, a confidence and interest in science, technology, engineering, and math, and a path to college, careers, and community engagement.

Girls rise when they are BOLD. This community invests in Girls Inc. as we build girls’ confidence, development as leaders, and advocacy skills—to advocate for themselves, their families, and our greater community and world.

Our girls inspire us, and we are humbled by their achievements. While our programs, people, and resources are tremendous supports, our girls do the hard work of rising to challenges, taking positive risks, and reaching for their goals. We were honored this year by the readers of Oakland Magazine as the Best Non-Profit of 2019. While this award speaks to our programs, results, and commitment to the community, it also speaks to the tenacity and achievements of our girls. They rise because we help support them, and we rise because you support us.

Thank you for being part of this incredible community. We are deeply grateful.

Warmly,
Julayne Virgil, CEO

When Adriana started Girls Inc. in the 1st grade, she was embarrassed about her ability to read in English. Her family spoke Spanish at home, and while she was a bi-lingual speaker, reading was hard. “I didn’t want to try,” she remembered. “I was afraid I’d be too slow for the class. It was scary and I didn’t know many words.”

Reading at grade level by 3rd grade is critical for future academic success, and English Language Learners are especially vulnerable to being left behind. Girls Inc. literacy programs directly address this need by improving vocabulary development, fluency, and reading confidence, and work with each student at their individual skill level. Adriana’s program leaders worked with her on phonics and reading aloud, among other skills. As she learned more words and could practice at her own pace without fear of being judged, her confidence soared.

Now in 5th grade, Adriana loves reading. She raises her hand in class and likes teaching others. “It was scary at first but now it is my favorite. I like the chapter books best because I can use my imagination and see the characters in my head. My little sister has started Girls Inc. too, and we read together at home. It is really fun to teach her words I know!”

Research shows that reading at grade level by third grade is a key indicator of future academic success. To help our girls succeed, Girls Inc. partners with teachers, administration, and specialists to identify students lacking literacy proficiency and selects the best methods to encourage them. Our programs seek to support our girls as they make the critical transition from learning to read to reading to learn.
Girls Inc. provides a continuum of engaging and inspiring curricula for girls, nurturing their STEM dreams, and helping those dreams become a reality.

Girls are critical to ensuring our STEM industries are innovative, diverse, and responsive to the needs of society – but they are still vastly under-represented in every STEM field. Girls Inc. provides a continuum of engaging and inspiring curricula for girls, nurturing their STEM dreams, and helping those dreams become a reality.

475 program hours per girl  80 hours of STEM programming including ten STEM field trips

The Need

- By eighth grade, girls are half as interested in math and science as boys
- 1/2 of 7th grade girls in Oakland do not meet school district fitness standards
- Between the ages of 8 and 14, girls’ confidence drops by 30%

The Impact

- 85% of girls indicated increased interest or engagement in STEM subjects
- 100% of girls participated in sports, from volleyball to yoga
- 3 in 4 girls engaged in two or more leadership opportunities

During middle school, girls...

- Build academic skills, and access STEM learning and mentorship
- Grow in leadership and sisterhood
- Learn how to care for themselves physically, mentally, and emotionally

Before Girls Inc.’s middle school program, Makayla described herself as shy. She rarely said “hi” to anyone and was unsure if people would like her for who she was.

At Girls Inc., things started to change. The all-girl environment created a safe space where she could express herself and explore new things. She tried fitness and yoga, went on field trips to local businesses, and took a cooking class during program. She knew about cooking from home because her mom was a caterer, and she realized she had a lot to say to her Girls Inc. sisters. She taught her peers about Liberian dishes, and opened up about her culture.

She credits Girls Inc. staff for building an environment of trust. “My program leader made me feel comfortable, and I learned I don’t have to put on a front. I can be who I am and be proud of my ideas.” Now Makayla is a high school junior, and considers herself very opinionated. “I tell everyone what I think, and I listen to what they have to say, too. I’ve done so many things with my Girls Inc. sisters and now we are bonded for life.” She hopes to attend an HBCU (Historically Black College or University) and plans to pursue pediatric medicine. “I never thought I’d be this outgoing,” she said. “But at Girls Inc., I found out who I am.”
Before Girls Inc., Ailani says she was depressed and unmotivated in school. She was bullied in junior high, and didn’t want to draw attention to herself, or ask questions. She also worried about getting into college if she didn’t do well in high school.

When she started programs at Girls Inc., something switched. “Everyone was so welcoming,” she said. “I met girls with similar backgrounds to me, and they were helping each other. On the first day our program leader said ‘there are no dumb questions’.” Ailani started asking for help and worked with Girls Inc. volunteer tutors to improve her grades, and she considers her program leader Carina to be one of the best teachers of her life.

While she was working hard to improve her academics, Girls Inc. placed her in an internship with a law firm, and she knew instantly that she wanted to be a lawyer. She started reading law books, went to court, and created case binders. She plans to pursue immigration law and be a resource to her community, and continues to network with the legal professionals she met in her internship. “I’m a whole different person now. I’m doing great in school, and will be the first in my family to go to college.” Her advice to current Girls Inc. students is to aim high: “Go for what you want and Girls Inc. will help you. I did, and look at me now!”

Girls Rise in High School

“Go for what you want and Girls Inc. will help you. I did, and look at me now!”

The Need

- 10% of U.S. Bachelor’s degrees in STEM fields are awarded to Latina or African American women
- 1 in 3 girls in the Oakland Unified School District will not graduate from high school
- U.S. public high schools implement less than 7 hours of sexual health programming on average per student

The Impact

- 100% girls increased their interest and confidence in STEM subjects
- 100% of girls in our College Access Now! program go on to college
- 100% of girls in our HEART program presented workshops on reproductive health

During high school, girls...

- Gain extensive exposure to STEM topics, internships, and careers
- Receive the support they deserve to be eligible for – and accepted to – college
- Recognize themselves as leaders through community advocacy

College, Career, and Leadership

Despite their intelligence and potential, many girls from under-resourced communities aren’t gaining the skills that will enable them to confidently reach for their dreams of college and career. At Girls Inc., girls are inspired to recognize themselves as scholars, leaders, and agents of change, and see first-hand that bold leadership can take them farther than they had imagined.

- 200 program hours per girl
- Girls participate in internships, workforce readiness, sisterhood, college access programs, academic support, and advocacy
HOW WE HELP GIRLS RISE

From the moment a girl walks through the doors, or first meets her program leader at school, we support the whole girl

- Academically, with programs that build skills, foster curiosity, and spark dreams for the future
- Emotionally, with programs that build resilience, self-knowledge and advocacy, and create safe spaces for learning and expression
- Physically, with programs that teach health, wellness, and positive risk taking

ANGELICA PEREZ, MBA
ALUMNA SPOTLIGHT

Angelica Perez, 34, didn’t always know what she wanted to do with her life, but in the 7th grade she knew one thing for sure: she wanted to be a Girls Inc. girl. With two older sisters in the program, she saw the opportunities Girls Inc. opened up. Both sisters were Girls Inc. National Scholars, and each won $10,000 college scholarships.

When she started Girls Inc. in 1997, Angelica characterized herself as shy, “I didn’t want to talk to people outside my family,” she said. Then, as now, Girls Inc. programs for middle and high school emphasized academic support in math and science, internships and career exploration, and health and fitness. She credits her program leader Marta for breaking her out of her shell. “Marta introduced me to sports,” she said. “I didn’t want to try but she encouraged me to get out there anyway and I played soccer and basketball for the first time.” To her surprise, Angelica discovered she was an athlete.

Taking risks on the field translated into taking risks in other areas. She got involved in Latinas y Que, a Girls Inc. program that built sisterhood and celebrated her Latina identity. She also took advantage of internships facilitated through Girls Inc. and worked during the summers at a women’s radio station in Oakland, and Habitat for Humanity. Her work in the community sparked a life-long love of service which led to international travel and humanitarian work in Costa Rica and the Dominican Republic.

When it came time to apply for college, Angelica won a $10,000 Girls Inc. National Scholarship and chose to attend UC Davis, majoring in communications. Her exposure to overseas public service led to an MBA from the University of San Francisco with a focus on international business.

Now Angelica is an analyst with Santa Clara County, using her skills in data and management to positively impact the lives of residents in the South Bay. She loves her work with the county, and looks forward to mentoring the women that are coming up behind her.

“Girls Inc. taught me to be strong, smart, and bold and I’ve advanced in my career because I learned to trust myself and believe in my abilities.”

And she’s still an athlete. She started a basketball team at her job and now her colleagues call her ‘coach.’ “My advice to all the girls is: take every opportunity Girls Inc. offers. You’ll make friends for life and always have that support network. What I learned in program is part of my identity- I am who I am because of Girls Inc.”

Looking Forward

At Girls Inc. of Alameda County, we are always building for the future. While we are proud of our results, we continually seek to improve our programs and our impact. Investment in our financial reserves and strategic initiatives allow us strengthen our agency, pilot new programs, and grow our efficacy.

ANNUAL EVALUATION AND PROGRAM ENHANCEMENT
Girls Inc. strengthens and improves our programming through a robust annual evaluation process. Throughout the year we collect data from program participants, caregivers, staff, and teachers with focus groups, surveys, and program observations. At the end of the year, programs are evaluated and enhanced based on data-driven learnings and insights.

INVESTMENT IN OUR STRATEGIC AND OPERATIONAL PLAN
To increase our presence and strengthen the agency, we are investing in people, infrastructure, and reserves to meet the evolving needs of our girls and community. We are carefully balancing growth with fiscal responsibility and are confident our plan will prepare us to build on our legacy with a strong team and ensure that girls have the resources they need to thrive for decades to come.

NEW DUAL-IMMERSION SPANISH/ENGLISH LITERACY PROGRAM
To better meet the needs of our Spanish-speaking students, we launched a new Dual-Immersion Spanish/English Literacy Program in 2019. Research shows that first learning to read in the language spoken at home improves students’ ability to read in English. We are grateful for the contribution from Sharon Davidson, who made this program expansion possible.

Now Angelica is an analyst with Santa Clara County, using her skills in data and management to positively impact the lives of residents in the South Bay. She loves her work with the county, and looks forward to mentoring the women that are coming up behind her.

“Data and analytics is a field dominated by men,” she said. “Girls Inc. taught me to be strong, smart, and bold and I’ve advanced in my career because I learned to trust myself and believe in my abilities. I want to instill that in all the other women I work with.”

And she’s still an athlete. She started a basketball team at her job and now her colleagues call her ‘coach.’ “My advice to all the girls is: take every opportunity Girls Inc. offers. You’ll make friends for life and always have that support network. What I learned in program is part of my identity- I am who I am because of Girls Inc.”
